MYSTERY SURROUNDS CRASH OF AIR LINER WHICH COST 8 LIVES

Eight Others Injured; Crash Occurred Less Than 2 Blocks From Chicago Airport

FOUR KILLED INSTANTLY

Craft Plunges to Ground from Height of 150 Feet; Sheers Off Roof of House

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO, Dec. 5—Death toll from the crash of a United Air Lines plane as it approached the Chicago Airport last night was raised to eight today when two more of the ship's passengers succumbed to their injuries.

Those who died today were Keller Melton, 40, Chicago safety engineer for the WPA, and Charles W. Manville, general sales manager for the National Refining Co. at Cleveland.

Meanwhile, hospital attaches reported two other victims were so badly hurt that it was feared they would die. They were the ship's stewardess, Florence Little, 22, Wilmette, Ill., and a passenger, George Haig, 50, of Cleveland.

Still others of the remaining six injured passengers were considered in critical condition, but except for Miss Little and Haig were given good chances to recover.

Four persons, including Pilot Captain Phil Scott, 34, Riverside, Ill., and Co-Pilot George Young, 30, Oak Park, Ill., were killed outright when the plane, arriving at Chicago from New York, plunged to destruction just before 6 p. m.

Complete mystery shrouded the cause of the accident, which occurred only minutes after Captain Scott had radioed the airport he had a clear view of the landing field.

The plane, a 21-passenger Douglas DC-3 transport, arriving at Chicago from New York, plunged to the ground just after 6 p. m. from a height of about 150 feet and less than two blocks from the airport, sheered off the roof of a house, wrecked a garage and severed an electric power line. In addition to the crew of three, 13 passengers were aboard.

Four of the victims were killed outright. They were Captain Phil C. Scott, 34, the pilot, of Riverside, Ill.; Co-Pilot George S. Young, 30, of Oak Park, Ill.; Lee F. Heneline, 38, eastern reservations manager for United Air Lines, of Chicago, and Stuart W. Moore, a

DOYLESTOWN MAY BUILD ATHLETIC FIELD

Cost, Including Extra Land, Would Be About $24,000; May Raise Tax Rate

RECEIVE ESTIMATES

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 5—The Doylestown School Board is giving serious consideration to building an athletic field and equipping the same. At a meeting held it was stated the cost would be $24,136, including $2,000 for additional land.

A. Oscar Martin and Fred F. Martin, local architects, who attended the meeting, submitted estimates for the new athletic field which would cost $22,136. The one and one-third acres of additional ground needed would cost $2,000, President William H. Satterthwaite, Jr., reported.

According to the architects, the grading, draining and seeding of the football field would cost $8,066, the hockey field $15,000, and the track $5,550. Steel stands would cost $2,250 and the fence about $4,000.

The architects pointed out that the cost of building these various layouts is only approximate, and that the price of the materials can vary up or down.

President Satterthwaite suggested that the sum of $5,000 or $6,000 could be lopped off from the $24,000 since some of the advantages of a good field could be had without having a fence or stands at once.

Supervising Principal J. Leonard Halderman spoke of the additional cost of maintenance.

The board discussed the use of P. W. A. aid. If it can be obtained, the local board will have to buy the materials, including tile, cinders, wheelbarrows, shovels and other equipment. Most of the labor would be unskilled.

Parking facilities were mentioned by President Satterthwaite and the board authorized Supervising Principal Halderman to get in touch with John B. Kelly, of Philadelphia, in connection with an athletic set-up for community fitness which is being stimulated by the federal government.

It was pointed out that the local school board will be out of debt in 1950. President Satterthwaite suggested that it might be advisable to raise the school tax one mill in order to pay

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

With two new traffic rules facing them, and new parking regulations in effect, motorists in Sellersville borough will find their mode of driving and places of parking somewhat altered.

The ordinance governing such was adopted this week, following complaints from a number of residents of the South section of Sellersville that they were unable to park their cars in front of their homes.

Three hour limits were placed on parking on parts of South Main street, Diamond street and Fairview avenue to relieve a condition caused by heavy parking by employees of the United States Gauge Company during working hours.

Two stop street intersections will be designated, one on Green street and the other on Church street, both of which are heavily traveled.

Council also took action on the new water rates. Francis Friel, an engineer from Philadelphia, had recommended increasing the water rates at least 50 per cent, but Council decided to ask Mr. Friel to change the rate schedule so that the average increase will be only about 50 per cent. There will be three rate schedules to cover private homes, public buildings and industrial plants.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

"Who Won The Election?"

Washington, Dec. 4.

THE other day Mr. Willkie made a plea for the abandonment of "vilification" by spokesmen both of the Administration and the anti-Administration forces. Both sides, he said, had been guilty in the recent campaign.

It made votes for neither. It was as bad as it was futile and an end should be made to it by common consent.

With that most people will agree, but the idea seems to find no favor with the more influential New Dealers in Washington, who meet every suggestion of compromise and co-operation with the truculent question, "Who won the election, anyhow?" One hears this question mouthed wherever the inner circles—and those who attach themselves to that group—congregate. It is the common expression of their attitude, indicative of their determination, now the fight is over, to dominate the administrative scheme and tolerate no "interference."

AFTER a recent visit to Washington, one of the more ferocious journalistic supporters of the President, who is closely linked with the more advanced New Deal clique, returned to New York and, voicing the "Who won the election?" slogan, editorially proceeded to vilify practically everyone not allied with the Administration in a way that would have seemed unrestrained in the heat of the campaign but which, under existing circumstances, argues an utter lack of both balance and restraint.

MR. WILLKIE's supporters were described as an "unholy coalition" Continued on Page Four

BLANKET OF SNOW IS BLAMED FOR ACCIDENTS

One Truck Overtakes When Forced Off The Highway; Temperature Rises

2 1/2 INCH FALL IN NIGHT

A blanket of snow descended on this section during the night, as temperatures which had hovered in the teens and twenties since Tuesday morning commenced a slow rise. When the populace awoke this morning it found the flakes which started falling at about 8:30 last evening had been multiplied, but with no wind occurring the fall was evenly scattered.

A few accidents due to the storm were reported in the area, but trains continued to operate on schedule; and telephone and light and power line companies experienced no difficulties with equipment.

Pennsylvania Railroad officials, at an early hour, called out gangs of workmen to keep the switches clear of snow.

Richard Horne, Mercerville, N. J., a driver for Castanea Dairy Company, was reported to have suffered a cut finger when his truck overturned on Bristol Pike, west of Wheatstead, early this morning. Horne stated that he

Police Chief Warns Of Treacherous Driving

Packed snow and ice resulting from today's storm plus thawing snow turning to ice with suddenly dropping temperatures, has made driving hazardous in some sections of Bristol, authorities warned today.

Chief of Police Linford J. Jones said streets are being kept open wherever possible but urged motorists to take practical precautions against the major hazards of skidding and obscured vision.

"Inadequate traction and poor vision are the primary dangers of driving when snow, sleet and ice prevail," Chief Jones said. "Under such conditions positive stop-and-go traction provided by tire chains is frequently vital to safety. Chains are also essential to getting through deep snow or over glare ice safely. Windshield wipers, defrosters and good lights help maintain adequate vision, but if the storm is bad and you can't see clearly, stop until you can."

Other safety rules for winter driving, based on National Safety Council research, follow:

1. Test brakes for simultaneous gripping. Unequalized brakes start skids. Check conditions of lights, windshield wiper, defroster and tire chains.
2. Watch out for children on sleds.
3. Travel at less than moderate speeds on snow or ice-covered highways and city streets.
4. The common practice of lowering tire pressure is a fallacy. The resulting increase in traction is slight, and this is more than offset by increased tendency to skid on curves. It also damages tires. Non-skid treads on tires are definitely helpful on dry and wet pavement, but on ice or packed snow they give no more anti-skid protection than smooth tires.
5. Leave plenty of room between you and the car ahead. Necessity for sudden stops and turns should be avoided. Take curves slowly, even with chains, and don't try to pass cars ahead of you on hills and curves.
6. When packed snow or ice prevail, put on tire chains and drive as carefully as if you didn't have them. Don't overtake and pass other vehicles without the protection of sand or chains. Chains on rear wheels alone reduce stopping distances 40 per cent., and on four wheels considerably more. Keep car in gear and apply brakes before you would in dry weather. "Pump" brakes to keep wheels from locking completely, even with chains.
7. Exercise greater caution generally and open cowl ventilator slightly to force out possible carbon monoxide gas, particularly in older cars. Winter driving can be safe with proper precautions, but if not prepared it is wiser to leave cars home until weather conditions improve.

Remember: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

PLEADS GUILTY TO BANK HOLD-UP HERE AND AT CHALFONT

Albert Rumford, 32, Given Heavy Sentence by Judge Hiram Keller

IS NOW SERVING TIME

Is Learning Mechanical Engineering and Studying English

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 5—One of the group of bandits who attempted to rob the Farmers National Bank of Bucks County at Bristol on May 7, 1931, and who was also with the gang which was caught after the holdup of the Chalfont National bank at Chalfont on March 13th, of the same year, appeared in court yesterday and was sentenced after pleading guilty.

Albert Rumford, 32, appeared before Judge Hiram H. Keller.

Rumford, who has served five years in the Eastern State Penitentiary and three years and eight months in the New Jersey State Prison, and who has been taking a course in mechanical engineering and English, told Judge Keller on the witness stand that he has learned his lesson and that his attitude toward life has changed.

A fine looking, well dressed man, Rumford seemed pleased when he was told by Judge Keller that the Court has heard some very good reports about his conduct from the penitentiary officials. Judge Keller sentenced Rumford to a fine of $1 costs, ordered him to restore the property stolen or the equivalent thereof and to serve eight to 16 years in the Eastern State Penitentiary the sentence to run concurrently with a 15 to 30 year sentence, which he is now serving in Philadelphia. Rumford will be eligible for parole in the near future.

All of the bandits in the two robberies have served sentences in other jurisdictions on other charges brought in New Jersey and Philadelphia.

The Chalfont robbery, according to Rumford's statement, netted $2750, none of which was recovered.

Rumford carried a gun at the hold-up, and, according to the investigation, planned both the Chalfont and Bristol holdups.

BOY SCOUT PREPAREDNESS

As America looks to the future it puts at the top of its inventory of resources its young manhood. There can be no better defense measures than those which fit young men for all the duties of citizenship. It is the American way not to think of the nation's youth as war material but as builders of American greatness in all the exigencies of human life.

To this end it has been an accepted fact for more than a quarter of a century that the Boy Scout organization is one of the best character-building agencies in the country. It is of interest, therefore, that the Boy Scouts of America National Council announced a nation-wide long-term Good Turn.

That is the Scouting way of saying a program is in progress inspired by the government's huge defense preparations. Scout troops are being built up to full strength of thirty-two Scouts each. Emphasis is placed on advancement through the Scout ranks by zeal, efficiency and promptness in emergencies so that every member will be at peak of effectiveness.

The suspicion which once prevailed that Boy Scout training in uniform was but a pretext to create an adjunct to militarism has been wholly abolished.

In the progress of America, War has been but a sporadic and relatively brief incident. But daily life, the demands of industry, the defense of American ideals in government, business progress and accidental emergencies make of daily value the discipline and training which Boy Scout membership gives to youth.

Immediate direction and control of Scout activities are the trust of senior Scouts and adult leaders who give freely of their time for this good work. Every citizen should accept the responsibility of backing the Scout movement in his own community and creating public sentiment in its favor.

SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES

Most readers of Longfellow—and there still are many such Americans, despite the snooty influence of high-brow critics—have a vague notion that poor old Myles Standish was doomed (if "doomed" is the word) to lifelong bachelorhood when Priscilla asked John Alden why he didn't speak for himself.

But historical and genealogical records prove that this was not the case at all. Captain Standish, doughty soldier who had fought in the Low Countries before joining the Pilgrims, was not so easily discouraged. After John had spoken for himself once, Myles went out and spoke for himself, not once but twice—and with success. So Myles Standish got to be a Pilgrim Father in the complete sense of the word.

This generation is reminded of this interesting, but generally overlooked, sequel to New England's most famous courtship by news of the death in Middleboro, Mass., of Myles Standish, ninth lineal descendant of the Pilgrims' one professional soldier. Myles Standish of Middleboro died on the Pilgrims' own Thanksgiving Day. He leaves a son who bears the same name that he, his father before him and a long line of Standishes bore—Myles.

It is gratifying to know that the fine name of the bashful but gallant soldier of Plymouth has lived on for these centuries—and will continue to live on. There is conclusive proof that the Myles Standishes know how to speak for themselves.

"HONEYMOON PREFERRED" by May Christie

SYNOPSIS

How could she win back Walter? Now, well known lawyer? That was the question uppermost in the mind of Jean Garrett, lovely young debutante as she danced with Tommy Alden, society playboy at the Yacht Club. A few nights previous, Walter had told her he would not be third man in a party which included philandering Pedro de Moraes and Tommy, and had dropped out of the picture. To add to Jean's chagrin, he was squiring the beautiful Helen Hobart tonight. Overhearing a remark that Walter was planning a party aboard his yacht later that night, Jean contrived to see him alone, hoping he will invite her. He treats her coldly and refuses to permit a photographer to take their pictures together, sarcastically remarking, "Press agent stuff isn't my line." Piqued because Walter didn't invite her either, Helen Hobart induces Tommy to slip out of the ship with her, and board Walter's cruiser, "Stormy Petrel," for a last ride.

CHAPTER THREE

Jean was alarmed for Tommy as he saw them sneak out the back entrance. Were they heading for his car? He mustn't be allowed to drive in his condition. There'd be an accident, or an arrest for drunken driving. Tommy was her guest, and she felt responsible for him.

Although it went against the grain, she hurried out after the pair. Saw that they were down by Walter's beautiful white cruiser, the Stormy Petrel!

She followed them into the cockpit. No one else was aboard, apparently. She begged: "Tommy, please come ashore! You haven't any right here, and you know it!"

Helen whispered: "I only brought him out for a breath of fresh air. Humor him for a minute. I've come brooding in my handbag, and I'm going to run in the galley for a glass of water, and we'll sober him up." She was gone.

To her horror, Jean saw Tommy turn on the switch. He pulled out the choke, put his finger on the self-starter, and the engine ran in neutral. He yelled: "Helen, unfasten the bow-line!"

"Stop it! Don't!" But it was too late. Helen had already done so! Jean rushed out of the cockpit just as Helen leapt back to the pier. Tommy threw in the clutch at the side of the steering wheel and opened the throttle. The boat sprang forward. Helen had tricked her! She was trapped!

"Hurrah, Jean!" Tommy shouted gleefully. "It's a lousy like being a bold buccaner!"

Under his fuddled guidance, as the boat sprang forward, it scraped the paint from the craft alongside, narrowly missing collision with a yacht.

Jean was shocked and terrified. "For heaven's sake, Tommy, put back!" she implored.

There were shouts from sailors in charge of the second boat. Jean had a glimpse of outraged faces in the moonlight, then they were out in the open river, going at full speed.

Fearful, she tried to stop him—tried to grab the wheel.

"Say, water was never my beverage, Jean! I don't wanna be 'mong the fishes on a cold night! I'll steer! No use to a bottle with it!" She knew nothing of handling this high-powered craft. Her only hope lay in handling Tommy. Helen had deliberately put her in this predicament. It would complete the break with Walter!

"By following them down here, I played right into her hands!" But, innately fair, Jean couldn't be actually sure of it. Maybe Helen had really meant to stay on the speedboat but, hearing the engine start up, had followed the instinct of self-preservation?

Tommy, as the river fairly churned under them, exulted: "I'm giving her the works! She's a beauty! Oh, boy!"

"But Walter works her, Tommy! He and his friends will be at the pier by now. When he finds his boat gone, there'll be terrible trouble!" "Shush! Don't crab! The devil with Walter! I wanna win my bet of hun-red bucks, kid!" "Who made the bet with you?" But she was now pretty sure. A sly, teasing look came in the blurred eyes. "Wouldn't you like to know, Jean? But I promised on word of honor as gentleman to keep it a secret!" "But what was the bet about?" She was distraught. "Making speed record! That's my specialty!" He named a flash far up the river. "I phone the Yacht Club—minute we get there—and win hun-red bucks!"

Ghostlike in the moonlight, the banks flew past. The heartening hope struck her that there might be a sailor asleep aboard the cruiser? She'd go be-

... and, if they ever had their honeymoon, hers, also? She must take just one peek. She looked. Blinking. Gaped. A woman's orchid pajamas hung in that cupboard. Pale blue satin negligee. Swansdown-frilled mules. Her face twisted wryly as she muttered: "This is a honeymoon cabin!" And a sickening feeling of jealousy caught her. She fairly dashed up the steep companionway. Hark! what was that? A weird hooting from another vessel. The owners were wigwagging lights at them!

"Tommy!" She rushed to the cockpit. "We're being followed! It's Walter! Please stop!"

"Never! It's a swell race! I gotta win that bet!" In his excitement he swerved sharply. Jean lost her balance and slipped sideways. Her head hit the low, to investigate. She'd wake him, and he'd take over, and get them safely back to the Yacht Club.

"Why don't you stop when you're ordered?"

The cold air penetrated her frail gown as she hastened to the steep stairs. The sleeping quarters were empty. She felt the last door. It opened. She felt for the switch, and light flooded the small cabin.

Walter's photograph was on the dresser. Those keen eyes smiled at her under his peaked yachting cap! Because of his snub at the party, and her present wretched predicament, that smile maddened her. She hurled photograph and frame to the floor. There was a sharp tinkle of glass.

"Ouch! That's unlucky!" She knew now that she wanted that picture. Wanted to possess it, no matter how he had acted. She removed the photograph. Flung frame and broken fragments through the open porthole.

The broken glass had cut the funniest little scar over his left eyebrow. Now he was looking at her with the identical expression he had had at the club when he had quipped that left eyebrow at her. . . as if she couldn't get away from his disapproval.

A challenging chin. A tight-lipped, fascinating mouth. To her surprise, she pressed her lips against that mouth of Walter Mallory.

"Conflict, huh? Feud? If you knew how I felt about you, we'd never quarrel, darling!" she whispered softly. And slipped the picture into the low-cut bodice of her evening gown.

Curiosity drew her attention to the main cupboard of the cabin. His clothes would be in there, perhaps deck, and the skirt of her frail gown caught on something, ripping it badly in front, and leaving a gap between skirt and bodice.

She was dazed by her fall. The siren of the other boat had a banshee moan now. Blood-curdling, after its shrieking. She staggered to her feet.

Tommy was exulting: "If that gang think they're going to catch up on us, they're crazy!" A shot rang out. He paled. His eyes had a glassy stare. His trembling hand cut off the power as he quavered: "Take the wheel, Jean! I'll have a look—" He lurched out of the cockpit.

"Ging! A bullet crashed into the mast, cutting it in two, showering splinters everywhere. Simultaneously he let out a howl, clutching his right arm.

"They got me!" Jean's terrified eyes saw a trickle of red from his coat sleeve. She let go the wheel. The boat slewed round. She got to Tommy. He lurched against her. Blood from the flesh wound splattered her bodice.

"It's a splinter from the mast!" she cried. She pulled the long sharp spike of wood from his torn sleeve and ripped off his coat. "Give me your hanky and I'll fix it!"

She fumbled, still dazed from her fall. Tommy was gaping at his gore arm. Neither saw the police boat come alongside. They didn't look up the grating of the grating of the grating.

"Hey, what's the big idea?" a stentorian voice bawled. "Why don't you stop when you're ordered?" The patrol came aboard.

CELERY IS VALUABLE
FOOD IN THE DAILY
DIET FOR THE FAMILY

By Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)
A large crop of Pennsylvania celery is now on the market. When the crowd shopper buys celery, she examines the bunches carefully for color, stalk length, compactness, and signs of age or damage. Often the consumer will insist on well-bleached celery, for with practically all varieties bleaching makes tenderness and palatability. Until recently there has been little green celery on the market, but today the grower will find new green varieties that are tender and delicious without bleaching.

Although celery ranks highest for its appeal, it does rate as a good source of calcium. Green celery is a source of vitamin A, whereas bleached celery contains almost none. The low carbohydrate content of celery makes it especially appealing to persons who wish increased bulk cottage cheese, mixed vegetable or the diet without additional calories, fruit and meat or fish salads.

Crispness is the key to its quality when celery is eaten raw. The inner parts of celery are used for celery hearts; the outer stalks are cut in fine strips. A bath in ice water gives crisp "curls" which along with radishes and pickles make pleasant additions to the menu.

Celery is generally eaten raw, but the larger, less tender stalks are delicious as a cooked vegetable. To cook, wash well and cut into small pieces. Put into boiling salted water, using only enough water to prevent the celery from burning. When the celery has cooked 15 to 20 minutes or until tender, it may be seasoned with butter and served. Or it may be added to a white sauce. Cooking in a small amount of water, helps to retain the vitamins and minerals.

Celery makes an excellent cream soup if added to a thin white sauce, using one-half to a cup of finely chopped celery to each cup of white sauce. Homemakers find celery is a useful seasoning to make inexpensive dishes palatable. Both the stalks and leaves of celery can be used in potato salad, or person who wishes increased bulk cottage cheese, mixed vegetable or the diet without additional calories, fruit and meat or fish salads.

As a seasoning for soups, gravies, stews and stuffings, celery is valuable. It can be chopped fine and put into a meat, salmon, or vegetable loaf to give it a more piquant flavor. Tops can be cooked with the stalks for soups. If there are more tops than can be used at once, they can be washed and dried thoroughly and put in a paper sack for future use.

Stuffings for the less tender roasting pieces, such as a shoulder, take on a new flavor when celery is added to the bread crumbs along with onion, butter, salt, and pepper.

Message to Santa Claus,

CHRISTMAS CITY

Here we are, Santa Claus, with the longest list you ever saw. Mother brings us to the Suburban Store of Strawbridge & Clothier often, because she says it is so convenient to park and we are so much at home here that she can tell us just where to meet her, and she can go about her shopping while we come to visit you.

Santa Claus, please bring Baby a cuddly doll and I heard Mother say she would like a new crib and chest of drawers for him.

We want you to bring Mother the prettiest things in the Store. There's a dressing gown with flowers on it, perfectly beautiful slips and nighties she'd simply adore. We heard her tell Grannie that she would like a new fur coat, too.

We have the grandest Dad ever and we hope you'll bring him a radio all his own, a copy of Oliver Twist, and the Wickham shirts he likes so much. He should have a new fountain pen. We know, because we borrowed his.

Grannie wants a reading lamp and big soft blue blankets, and she'd like a pair of frivolous house slippers. As for Gramp, he wants a chair that you simply sink into and all the books in the world.

Sister is easy to please. Just bring her a scarab bracelet, a frilly dance frock, stacks of silk stockings, letter paper, a skating skirt and jacket, of course, skates and about six sweaters.

We are not fussy, either, Santa Claus. We would love bicycles, and a ping pong table, and some games, a new engine for the Lionel train set. We really should have skates and new wind-proof ski suits and we'd like a really big box of candy. We see lots of wonderful things for gifts all over the Store, but we must not keep Mother waiting, and anyway, we'll be back, soon.

Blanket of Snow Is Blamed for Accidents

was forced off the roadway by an approaching machine. Another truck was dispatched to the scene to deliver the goods.

A troupe of dancers from New York City was injured during the night when the car in which they were riding skidded and struck a truck which had "jack-knifed" after skidding on the Lincoln Highway at Fallsington. The injured are: Victor Beres, laceration of left eye; Irene Yarova, bruises of left hip; Gloria Comis, fracture of left wrist and lacerations of head; Patricia Puig, possible fracture of the ribs, and severe lacerations of right leg and knee. They were taken to Parkland First Aid station for treatment.

The driver of the car in which those injured were riding was Rudolph Dairo Puig, New York, husband of Patricia Puig.

The party was proceeding to Baltimore, Md., to fill an engagement when the accident occurred. The truck involved had been operated by William Becker legman, Philadelphia. After the truck "jack-knifed," legman was said to have been putting out flares when the sedan struck the truck.

When the snow reached a depth of one inch snow plows were put to work, with five additional men augmenting the crew in the area between South Langhorne and Bristol. Joseph Seader, foreman of the State Highway Department crews in this area, also states that intersections and had hills and curves are being cindered. The plows in this section started out at five a. m., while in the upper end of the county, due to the snow arriving earlier, the plows were in use yesterday afternoon.

The Bell Telephone Company reported that work is proceeding under normal conditions, that company not experiencing any difficulty due to the snowfall. The Philadelphia Electric Company also announced that the snow had not hampered service or caused any damage to lines.

The temperature during the night lowered to 30 degrees, according to records at the Rohm & Haas weather observatory here. With the mercury at 17 above zero yesterday morning at eight o'clock, it rose three degrees in the next hour, and four more degrees by 10 o'clock. The steady climb continued until two p. m., yesterday, when it reached 34, remaining there until seven last evening, and reaching 35 at eight p. m. By nine it had dropped to 32 degrees, and throughout the night went down to 31 and 30.

The snowfall as gauged at the local weather observatory was 2½ inches in the 24 hour period ending at eight a. m., today. The precipitation was .24 inch.

Bristol police station officials received the following report from the Pennsylvania Department of Highways, as to storm and highway conditions throughout Pennsylvania: Northwest, ½ to 1 inch of snow, still snowing, cloudy, temperature 21 to 31 degrees; roads icy; North central, ¼ to 2 inches of snow, still snowing, sleeting and raining, 22 to 30 degrees; roads icy; Northeast, ¼ to 4 inches of snow, still snowing, 34 to 40 degrees; Southeast, ½ to 1½ inches of snow, still snowing, sleeting, cloudy, 28 to 34 degrees; South central, 1 to 3 inches of snow, still snowing and raining, 25 to 34 degrees; Southwestern, ½ to 3 inches of snow, still snowing and sleeting, freezing, roads icy, 28 to 39 degrees. All main highways are open to traffic, it is reported, but motorists are advised to proceed with caution.

Natural Gas Well Explodes

Bay City, Mich., Dec. 5—With a terrific roar, Michigan's largest natural gas well exploded shortly after two a. m. today and a subsequent fire sent flames leaping 100 feet in the air.

No one was injured as the four men on duty at the time were eating in a shack some distance away. Two of the men had been in the derrick 20 minutes earlier.

Mystery Surrounds Crash of Air Liner Which Cost 8 Lives

U. S. Ordnance Engineer, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Jane Selby, 27, of Chicago, and Wilbert J. Austin, 54, president of the Austin Company of Cleveland, O., an industrial engineering firm, died later at a hospital.

The other injured were: Paul Ryan, 40, president of the National Refining Co., Cleveland.

R. G. Woodbury, 41, vice-president of the Textile Banking Co., New York City.

George Haig, 50, of the Sherwin-Williams Co., Cleveland.

Theodore F. Paulsen, 44, of Wilmette, Ill., a department head for Montgomery Ward & Co.

O. N. Frederick, 52, U. S. Ordnance Engineer, of Cleveland.

Richard Pettite, 26, a government employee, of Boston, Cal.

In an effort to obtain some clue to the accident, United Air Lines officials and representatives of the Civil Aeronautics Authority today began a minute examination of the wreckage.

United officials discounted a theory, advanced by some of the passengers and by witnesses to the crash, that ice, forming on the wings, had so weighted down the ship that it nosed over and plunged to earth when the pilot cut his speed preparatory to landing.

Adding additional mystery to the crash was the fact it came only minutes after Captain Scott had advised the airport he had a clear view of the landing field.

Flames flared briefly from the plane when it crashed, as gasoline ignited in the engine, but none of the bodies removed from the plane had been touched by fire.

Visibility at the airport at the time of the crash was one mile, air line officials said; the ceiling was 1,200 feet. Flying conditions, it was announced by the line, were far better than required under Commerce Department regulations.

"We are completely at a loss to explain the accident," said one spokesman for the company, "but it seems most unlikely the wings were iced. An examination of the plane as soon after the accident as possible revealed no traces of ice. Nor were there any traces of fire. The flames reportedly seen by witnesses must have come from ignited gas in the engine."

Friends who spoke with one of the injured passengers at the hospital, Wolins, gave a different version. Wolins, they said, was a veteran air traveler, and not easily mistaken in such matters, but he told them he had noticed ice forming on the wings.

The transport, two hours overdue at Chicago after battling adverse winds from Cleveland, had been instructed to circle the airport until another plane had been landed. It circled the field for about 20 minutes before it started to come in.

Woodbury, who suffered a broken leg, said that just before the crash he noticed one of the wings "tilting low."

"Then we shot down rapidly," he continued, "skimming along over some object with a raking sound and finally hit the garage with an awful crash."

"I found myself on the floor in the aisle. It seemed to me the plane was afire, and with great effort I yanked my leg free and crawled out of the plane. I just kept on crawling until I reached a nearby house where I asked a lady for a drink of water. Then the rescuers arrived and put me in the ambulance."

Both the pilot and co-pilot of the plane were air veterans. Capt. Scott had been with United seven and one-half years, was married and the father of a two-year-old son. Co-pilot Young also was married, and his wife is an expectant mother. He joined United a year ago.

Pleads Guilty To Bank Holdup Here and Also at Chalfont

Doylestown sub-station of the State Police, testified that he made the investigation and secured a confession from Rumford.

Hiram F. Brunner, cashier of the Chalfont National Bank, testified that Rumford held him up at the point of a pistol. Brunner said three of the bandits carried guns.

Thomas Scott, cashier of the Farmers' National Bank, related what happened on May 7, 1931, describing Rumford's part.

"Rumford cried out: 'If you turn in an alarm, I'll shoot you,'" Scott testified.

Scott said five shots were fired at the bandits' automobile. The bandits were not masked, Scott testified.

Rumford then took the stand. Rumford only went to the sixth grade in school. He learned the auto mechanic trade and conducted a successful business in Philadelphia until he failed during a depression.

"Yes, sir, I am the man who held up both banks," Rumford, who is serving 15 to 30 years now, testified.

Rumford admitted that he was the ring leader of the bank robbing gang.

for the new athletic field and pay off the amount as quickly as possible rather than drag it out over a number of years.

He said this was entirely his point of view, and no discussion concerning the financing of the layout was discussed other than President Satterthwaite said it might be a good idea to keep the borrowing credit of the school board as low as possible, since the time might come when they would want to borrow a large amount, and then their slate would be clean.

Mr. Halderman suggested that for $18,066 a football and hockey field, track and field pits could be constructed.

of Communists, Fascists and realistic money men," who know "from which end of their bonds the coupons are cut." The editorial was also replete with a lot of catch phrases, such as "Red-baiting publishers" and "publishers' agents" and "Fascist-minded industrialists," etc., mixed in with bombastic declarations such as "We are going to carry right on with the principles of the New Deal" and "We are going to make this country a better and fairer country in which to live." And there was fierce denunciation of those who dislike collective bargaining and dissent from the New-Deal philosophy.

IT was a fine example of confused thinking and violent writing, the main idea of which seemed to be to picture all those who dissent from the "principles" of the New Deal as sinister and vicious and all those who adhere to them as wise and noble. In effect, it was a campaign speech of the cheapest and most virulently demagogic kind. Of course, it is not important except that unquestionably it reflects the attitude and feeling of a group of men influential in the Administration and close to Mr. Roosevelt.

THEY represent the extreme New Deal view, but they do occupy positions of importance within the Administration and they are much more articulate than any other group. There has been a great deal said since the election about the necessity for national unity to promote the defense program. Some of the pleas for unity have come from supporters of the President and some from his opponents.

In the main, the latter, including Mr. Willkie, have shown a disposition to co-operate with Mr. Roosevelt—so far as he will let them—on defense and in support of his foreign policy, which is to give all the aid possible to the British.

SOME of the strongest critics of the President are eager to follow his lead in this direction, no matter how far he chooses to go—if only he will provide the leadership. But it hardly promotes national unity in a crisis to have his friends belligerently inquiring "Who won the election?" and inspiring editorials clearly designed still further to stir up class hatred, increase ill will and keep alive campaign rancor by an outbreak of name calling. Mr. Roosevelt could make no greater personal contribution to the national unity we so badly need than by suppressing these radical aides and discouraging those who seek to be their journalistic spokesmen. Perhaps he will move along this line when he returns from his vacation.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

A picture as timely and exciting as the latest news bulletin will open at the Grand Theatre today when Warner Bros. "A Dispatch From Reuters" starring Edward G. Robinson, starts its local run. The screen has brought to the front the stories of many famous people but never before has it revealed the tale of a person so widely heard of, but so little known.

Robinson plays the part of Julius Reuter, whose speedy dispatches held within them the fate of empires and who did more to form the ethical credo of news gathering than any in history.

RITZ THEATRE
Oddest article yet designed by the 20th Century-Fox wardrobe department is a four-sleeved sweater that Robert Spierling wore for his role in "Yesterday's Heroes," coming today to the Ritz Theatre.

The sweater has three interchangeable left sleeves. The reason for this is that Sterling, who portrays an all-American star in the gridiron story wears the sweater during his college days. After each college year, a letterman's stripe is added to the sweater. "Private Affairs" starring Nancy Kelly, Robert Cummings, Hugh Herbert and Roland Young, is currently playing at the Ritz Theatre.

ALL LOWER BUCKS SCHOLASTIC GRID ELEVEN IS PICKED

Morrisville Places Seven On Two Star Teams

DA BRONZE STANDS OUT

Last Place Bristol Squad Is Well Represented

By Jack W. Gil

Reaching out into the wide open grid spaces to gather in a handful of stars was a difficult task this season. Balance in team strength made selections debatable.

Morrisville high school leads the list with seven selections on the two teams. The elevens are composed of member schools who yearly play ball in the Lower Bucks Scholastic conference. Chosen by an impartial committee of three, including Mike DeRisi, coach of Falls Township high school; James Doherty, basketball coach at the same school, and myself, each decision was weighed heavily before being finally rendered.

The 1940 all-conference backfield, led by two boys who were undisputed in their posts, Bob Purcell, of Morrisville, and Clarence Pidcock, of Newtown, is rounded out by Henry Killian, of Bensalem, and Clem Peterpaul, of Bristol.

Heading the second team offensive runners was Bobby Keys, a surprise choice to many, who was chosen from the Morrisville team because of his passing and blocking. Al Driver, speedy colored Newtown halfback, rugged Warren Gotwald, hard-running Langhorne ball carrier, and Chick DiAngelo, of Bristol, round out the starting quartet.

The first team is flanked by Beadle, of Morrisville, at end, and Dick Colbert, Bensalem, at the other wing. Although there was little doubt as to Beadle's worth, Colbert took the nod over Joops Mangiacini, of Bristol, due to his valued pass-snatching that enabled Bensalem to tally many a point. Mangiacini and Krusen, of Newtown, made the other squad.

"Naz" Marini, a hard-playing Bensalem veteran, who saw action in every contest and was somewhat of an "iron man," impressed almost all who saw him in action. Joe Iannucci, at the bottom of every scrimmage for Bristol, was equally as sure of a first team tackle slot. Russ Cloak and McGowan, of Langhorne and Morrisville, respectively, made the second team.

Ted Devoe, who played great ball against Bristol in the opener here, and who rose to a peak performance in Bensalem's losing cause to Morrisville, shared a good niche with Morrisville's "Tack Tack" Gandelman. LaRue, also of Morrisville, and Fischer, a steady playing Newtown veteran, took second team honors.

No finer gesture to a team leader could be paid to any football player than to be named as captain of his conference all-star unit. This honor was bestowed upon Vince DeBronze, Morrisville center, whose spiritual guidance and scrappy tendencies led Morrisville to a championship. In years past it has always been the "name" men who have taken the team captaincy. Da Bronze kept plugging and taking it up for his side as well as exhibiting a far superior game at the pivot post than most of the men whom he opposed. George Strickler, big Bensalem snapper-back, was the choice for the other eleven.

Purcell, noted for his grand running and mistering line crunching, was a unanimous member. So was Pidcock, whose passing zoomed Newtown into second place in the league. Killian, dubbed "Heavin' Hank" after his marvelous pass pitching against Morrisville, came so close to pitching Bensalem to a title that it wasn't funny to the Bulldogs. He plugged a gaping hole left vacant by Bob Scarborough, who failed to repeat this year only because he was out with a knee injury. Peterpaul, whose power was instrumental in Bristol's attack this season, got the nod over Al Driver, of Newtown.

The surprise move of sticking Keys on the team may startle many, but to those who watched closely, the selection is no more than fair. Standing up close, his left-handed tosses hit their mark often for Morrisville. He is small, but an able blocker, who dealt out rapping blocks. Driver's speed and passing was Newtown's main attack. Gotwald, another fine back on a losing team, practically punted Bristol into defeat, although his chief attribute is a rugged ground game. Chick DiAngelo, hemmed in often at Bristol, kept breaking away and passing for large gains.

FIFTH WARD CLUB DEFEATS FRANKLIN IN CLOSE CONTEST

Thrilling Contest Played Before 200 Hectic Fans in Mutual Aid Hall

FANS WERE ENTHUSED

Winners Took Advantage of Every Opportunity To Score

Before 200 hectic fans, the Fifth Ward Sporting Club and the Franklin A. C. played the most thrilling basketball game of the season last night on the Italian Mutual Aid court and when the final gun barked the final score stood: Fifth Ward, 32; Franklin, 29.

Both teams had their share of rosters for the contest and the wild cheering of the fans echoed throughout the hall as their respective teams scored points. In fact, the noise was so loud at the end of the tilt that Timekeeper Al Tentilucci used three blanks in the gun before hostilities would stop.

Franklin had many opportunities to win the contest, especially in the final two minutes of the contest when they aimed at least twenty shots at the basket but it seemed as if the lid was closed for the night as the ball refused to drop through. Even if Franklin had made one-half of their foul tries in the final moments of the tilt, a different story may have had to be written.

As it was Fifth Ward won. Won because it took advantage of every opportunity that came its way. The Warders trailed most of the tilt but played heads-up. What few shots they received at the nets were good enough to convert into two-point goals.

Even when Franklin came from behind to deadlock the score in the third period, the Warders refused to give in an inch and kept fighting all the way. Franklin was in possession of the ball most of the time but the Warders' zone defense could not be broken and the goals that the Franks did make were well earned.

"Reds" Pica sank in the foul shot which broke the deadlock which had reached to a 29-29 score with four out of four. He also added two twin-pointers to score eight points. But this wasn't all. Florito was all over the floor blocking passes and also nabbing the sphere on the rebounds from the backboard.

DeLissio also stood out in the Warders' triumph, doing his best playing in the final quarter when Florito left the game via the personal foul route.

Except for its erratic shooting in the final stages of the game, the Franklin team outplayed the winners. Bert Barbetta was a bulwark on the defense for the Wood Streeters, although he left the game in the last session, complaining of a pain in the side. "Freddie" Barbetta had an off night for the Franklin team, making but

DISCOVER LEAPING MOUSE

SACRAMENTO, Cal. — (INS) — A mouse that leaps like an Australian kangaroo, a three-toed woodpecker, and a shrew only three inches long counting its tail, were some of the freaks recently found in Taboe National Forest in California. The specimens are being collected by the University of California.

SCREAM CHASES BANDIT

BOSTON — (INS) — A woman's scream was proven more powerful than a holdup man's gun in an attempted holdup at a traffic light on Commonwealth avenue. A youthful bandit attempted to holdup Mrs. Barbara Sheehan, Waban, when she stopped her automobile for the traffic light. As he opened the door of the automobile, Mrs. Sheehan screamed. The bandit fled.

"ONE FOR ALL AND ALL FOR ONE" MOTIVATES THE GROUP WHICH IS NOW DEVELOPING BRYN GWELED HOMESTEADS LOCATED ON STUMP BRIDGE ROAD

Group Locating in Bucks County Builds Home-Site After Pattern of A "Good Neighbor" Community—Desired "Room to Breathe"

"One for all and all for one" is the aim of the New Bucks County "Good Neighbor" Community, which is being developed on Stump Bridge road, between Feasterville and Churchville.

Known as Bryn Gweled Homesteads, this development will be in the opinion of residents of the area, be a distinct improvement to that area.

Of the Bryn Gweled Homesteads Maurice Ritter wrote in a recent issue of The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin:

Economists and theorists may see unlimited social significance in the aims and accomplishments of Bryn Gweled Homesteads.

But the little group of 29 men and women who pooled ideas, efforts and resources to buy 238 acres of rolling countryside in lower Bucks county was motivated by only one desire: A home in the country "with room to breathe" for themselves and their children.

Bryn Gweled Homesteads depends upon communal effort. But don't mention the word Communism. Members quickly explain that it is just a matter of joining together to get something they couldn't get singly by individual effort.

Neither is it completely experimental. Ralph Borsodi, economist and author, established a community somewhat along the pattern of Bryn Gweled in his School for Living at Suffern, N. Y. The Single Tax colony at Arden, Del., has some similar features. The Pocomo Preserve, although only a summer colony, works along on the same lines.

Bryn Gweled Homesteads is in no sense a commercial development. "Our community is for members only and was incorporated as a non-profit organization in Bucks county courts," said Herbert Bergstrom, president of the organization.

Two tenant farm houses, both still in state of "disrepair, three wooded areas and two sizable streams meandering through meadows mark the corporation's acres on Stump Bridge road between Feasterville and Churchville, about 20 miles from City Hall.

Already surveys have marked off all but 80 acres into plots of about two acres as prospective home sites, and a roadway system has been approved.

Sites not already chosen will be selected by new members as they are admitted to the group. Four-fifths of the membership must approve by vote before an applicant is accepted.

The 80 unplotted acres, including the woods and a lake site, will be given over to a park. Around the bigger and better of the old stone farm houses—to be rehabilitated as a community house—15 acres will be developed as playgrounds, tennis courts and baseball diamonds.

The germ of what was to become Bryn Gweled appeared simultaneously in two places. Down in Bedford Center, community house at 619 Kater St., Bergstrom, his wife and two other couples connected with the center, discussed such a plan. At the same time three families living at Carl Mackley House, in the Northeast, were having the same idea.

"Somehow we got together and, determining to really go places, started calling friends who might be interested," says Bergstrom. "This is the result."

The first formal meeting was held October, 1939, and the group has met two times or more a week since.

Then came the problem of finding land within an hour commuting distance from the city. For a long time results were disheartening. "Prices of available land ranged from $200 to $3,000 an acre, much too high for our purpose," Bergstrom said.

Eventually the Franklin C. Read estate was purchased for $18,000, an approximate cost of $78 an acre. On May 20 incorporation papers were signed and, going into the history of their tract, the members selected the Welsh name which means "Hill of Vision."

Members paid an entrance fee of $50 which entitles them to a vote in affairs of the corporation. Wives as well as husbands are members, so the ladies are sure of not having to depend upon their husbands for a voice in management.

Families hold a 99-year-lease on their individual two acres, which are selected by drawing lots, and each family pays a nominal monthly rental. The annual budget provides for all expenditures, including taxes, interest on capital—which was raised among members and friends without outside financing—and development costs.

The budget is apportioned to the number of plots available, now tentatively 79, and each family pays only its share. If the community fails to attract sufficient additional members to occupy all home plots, the cost of the extra land will be prorated periodically.

A site-planning and architectural advisory committee passes on proposed building. As few restrictions as possible on location and architectural style will be imposed and price range of houses will be limited to somewhere between $5,000 and $15,000.

Several member families plan to build their homes on the unit plan, a living room, kitchen and bath, later adding as their financial status permits. Homes and improvements will be the property of the homesteader but he may not sell to anyone not approved by four-fifths of the membership.

The Corporation plans to help each member as much as possible on building and plans are afoot to take over financing of homes eventually.

"The settlement is built upon a foundation of democratic assistance and when things get under way, it is not unlikely one will find whole families at work clearing woodlands, developing the landscape and doing other duties on the Homesteads," Bergstrom said.

Two families are going to begin building their homes before Christmas, while others are waiting until spring.

All members will have a hand in erecting community buildings and improving grounds. Each family will have its own garden plot but cooperative farming is being considered for unused land.

Other projects include a community workshop and a handicraft shop where machines and tools too expensive or unwieldy for individual ownership will be installed. Power lathes and looms for weaving are cited as two necessary units.

On playgrounds, the proposed lake and nursery school and in other community affairs for the dozen small children who will pioneer the junior division, members will take turns as supervisors and instructors. Several families plan to keep chickens and bees and there is talk of a common grazing ground for cows.

The community is being welcomed by the present residents of the countryside, many of whom believe the development will increase the values of their own properties.

Harry Gill, who with his brother, J. Alva Gill, operate a coal business in Churchville, is enthusiastic about the Bryn Gweled Community.

"All residents of this section are glad to see people of the type represented in the new community moving into the neighborhood. Many of us were afraid the plot would be divided into little sections with cheap homes packed side by side," Gill said. "My brother and I are delighted."

Harry Gill lives several miles from Bryn Gweled but his brother's farm is directly across Gravel Hill road and faces the new development.

Mrs. Luther D. Lovekin, Jr., who also lives on Gravel Hill road, is the wife of a real estate operator and agrees with the Gills that the new-

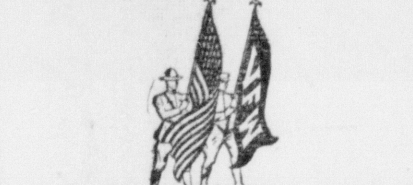

Today's Lesson in Flag Etiquette

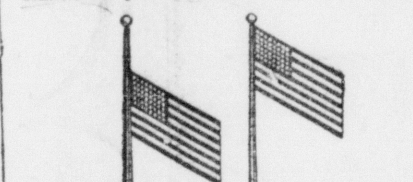

● The flag should always be flown or displayed with the stars to the left and with the stripes floating to the right.

● When hanging with the stripes in a vertical position, the stars should always appear in upper left hand corner.

● On parade the American flag always claims the place of honor—at the right.

● When flown at half-staff the flag should be hoisted to the peak for an instant and then lowered to the half-staff position. Before lowering the flag it should be raised again to the peak. On Memorial Day, May 30, the flag should be displayed at half-staff from sunrise until noon and at full staff from noon until sunset.

en, social workers and housewives. Miss Madeline Erskine, member of the board of directors of Friends Central School and the Germantown Y. W. C. A., and interested in social work, is the only unmarried woman in the group.

Ages of members range from 30 to 50. "As representative a group of men and women as could be found anywhere," Bergstrom says as he points to another article of incorporation:

"The success of Bryn Gweled Homesteads will depend upon the sustained interest of the members and their ability to maintain, develop and further these purposes . . ."

"We'll do all right," he smiles.

CAT MOTHERS BABY RATS

PORTLAND, Ore. — (INS) — Residents of the town of Marshfield, Oregon, are scratching their heads these days and trying to recall anything even remotely resembling the curious case of George Ramberg's cat. After becoming the mother of five kittens one night recently, the cat scoured the neighborhood until she found two baby rats which she now mothers and feeds with her kittens.

AMPLE SUPPLY OF TURKEYS FOR HOLIDAY

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5—There will be no shortage of turkeys at the holiday season this year, according to reports of John H. Light, Secretary of the Department of Agriculture.

Reported figures show some increase over last year, when there were nearly 33 million turkeys raised for market.

The Pennsylvania turkey crop is placed at 856,000. Early marketing of turkeys, which began in October, accounted for a larger number of turkeys than in former years—about 12 per cent of the crop having been disposed of. It is expected that 45 per cent of the crop will be placed on the market in November and that 33 per cent will go to the block during December. The remaining 10 per cent will be held for sales during January and February and later in the season.

For some time, experiments have been made toward production of a "streamlined" turkey, one smaller in weight, of good dressing quality, with big broad breast, and although these experiments have proved successful, the new type bird is not yet being produced on a commercial basis. This year, it is reported that the average turkey shows a slight increase in weight over that of last year.

Turkey raising over the past few years has advanced greatly as a commercial enterprise. Formerly, most of the turkeys came from the general farm, produced from home hatching. Today there are many farms devoted to turkey raising alone. However, this year there was recorded a decrease of 16 per cent in hatching on those farms, while the "home" or general farm hatching increased to such an extent as to cause a slight increase in the total crop over that of 1939.

It is also noted that over the past few years, turkey has won for itself a place on the year-round menu, instead of being looked upon largely as a holiday season delicacy, which has brought much impetus to the industry. It retains, however, its enviable leadership on the holiday menu.

ABUNDANT SUPPLY OF CHRISTMAS GREENS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5—An abundant supply of shrubs and pine used for Christmas decorations are found in Pennsylvania.

Many people living in the mountains and rural districts find a means of employment during the Fall in collecting and selling these leaves, vines, branches and berries. Charles E. Bear, Deputy Secretary of the Department of Forests and Waters, said today.

Ground pine, a low moss-like evergreen plant, is collected and woven into chains. Leaves of laurel, the State Flower, are commonly made into ropes and chains for festooning doorways and walls. The mountain ash, winter-berry and hawthorn are gathered during this season of the year because of their colored berries and used for Christmas decorations.

The American holly, so commonly used for Christmas decorations, is native to Pennsylvania but apparently was more common during Colonial days than at present. Today it is rarely found and likely has been exterminated as a result of destructive gathering. It has been found in limited quantities in the southern portions of the State and specimens have been reported as far north as Clinton County. It grows rather slowly but lives a long time and is the tallest of the native short-leaved evergreens.

An interesting feature about the American holly is that the male and female flowers are commonly borne on separate trees. Seedlings from planted seeds are often in the proportion of ten male to one female tree and the latter are the ones which bear the berries. Plants usually bear flowers and fruit at an age between five and 12 years and until that time it is difficult to distinguish the male from the female.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly
(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing for International News Service)
HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—Active sport clothes and feminine curves have become real allies this winter by showering one another with compliments at the sun spas where they are both much in evidence. "No more boyish attitudes in either material or styling for our sports wear" is the latest contention of the stars who have decided to be utterly feminine even in the way they pose after they don this girlish garb.

Petal pink duvetyn, the material hitherto holding exclusive rights in the suit and coat departments, is the lush material used in Brenda Marshall's newest sun suit. Since the material is sufficient to put the suit definitely on the feminine side Brenda was allowed freedom in styling. Just above-the-knee shorts have free action pleats and a top with wide straps meets the shorts only in front. Her sun shoes are "Puck stockings" in pink gabardine with backs that swoop to a peak. Brenda wore this suit of a week-end after completing "South of Suez."

Shapely Dorothy Lamour likes the oriental theme in her play clothes. At the opening of the Palm Springs Tennis club, Dorothy wore a hyacinth blue pique printed in white and golden tropical flowers. Around the bared midriff Dorothy wore a "garter" of blue closed with a small gold oriental dagger. And over the shorts she could tie a fabulous Balinese skirt in blue with border of the print.

And then there is Bette Davis who is still so Hawaiian Island conscious after her trip last Spring that she is constantly experimenting with a lei of gardenias over her island-motifed lounging pajamas. (Bette calls these "patio pajamas.") Femininity personified this! One pajama she likes is in light green heavy silk with a tropical fern design in darker green. Bette likes nothing better than to wear this ensemble and eat one of her own South Sea dishes in her spacious patio.

When Lana Turner invited friends to play badminton and ping pong at her home she wore a clever costume in mauve and white Scotch plaid gabardine with pleated skirt simulating a kilt. Lana's shirt was the casual shirt-maker type with lapel carrying a sprig of heather fashioned from delicate purple feathers.

A charming outfit worn by Priscilla Lane for swinging a golf club at least five early mornings in every week is in gray with green. Over a gray woolen dress with a free-for-freedom skirt Priscilla laces up a long dooskin jerkin in grass green, the wide collar of her dress worn over her jerkin.

NEW YORK—(INS)—Slim with drapery is the formula for the smartest dresses to wear to important winter dinners.

In crepe, jersey or wool, the dresses are draped to accentuate the slim silhouette, highlighting the best point of the figure. The material is draped or swathed with the artistry of a sculptor.

One dress of black silk crepe has a wrap-around skirt, swathing the waist tightly then falling in draped fullness down the front. The bodice is simple, with a pleated, deep V-neck. A jeweled piece adds color at the point of the V.

Another use of drapery is found in a peplum-effect mode. The lines of the white jersey dress are straight and slim, except for three rows of the material arranged in peplum style around the hips. The neckline is high and crossed and the sleeves are long.

Drapery in Up-and-Down Effect
Drapery used in an up-and-down effect is another version. This dress, in Parma violet, has the short-in-front look. The material is caught up at the waist and the skirt-line is several inches shorter at the middle of the front. Side pockets are placed at the hips.

Slimness is achieved in a crepe dress through the use of the long torso line. The fullness is kept low over the hips.

The tight waist minimizes the midriff. The neckline is diamond shaped and the sleeves three-quarters length.

Dinner dresses are often worn with turbans, calots elaborately decorated with feathers or flowers, pillboxes of sequins or other decorative chapeaux.

When a hat is not worn, the hair is elaborately coiffured with jewel ornaments as accent notes. Mantillas and combs also appear on the winter scene.

OHIO PREXY MEETS ALUMNI

COLUMBUS, O.—(INS)—An extensive tour of eight eastern cities for the sole purpose of becoming acquainted with Ohio State University alumni is planned for December by Dr. Howard

L. Bevis, new president of the Columbus Institution. Dr. Bevis will make his first stop at the Pittsburgh Alumni club the night of December 2nd. Other cities he will visit are Washington, December 3rd; Philadelphia, December 4th; New York City, December 5th; Albany, December 6th; Syracuse, December 7th; Rochester, December 8th; and Buffalo, December 10th.

CAMPAIGN DISBURSEMENTS

AKRON, O.—(INS)—Reporting total expenditures of 35 cents in his successful campaign for re-election, State Rep. Gus Kasech (D) said 25 cents was for a pound of candy given an Akron editorial writer "for not endorsing me for election."

It will be a white Christmas, and a merry Christmas, too, if he gets TruVal whites. These are no ordinary shirts! Cut on form-fit patterns of fine combed broadcloth, and Sanforized-shrunk to insure perfect fit... these are only two of TruVal's many outstanding features.

A third feature is the new ingenious "multi-ply" construction of the collars and cuffs. Recent tests by the American Institute of Laundering show that famous TruVal whites will launder considerably over 100 times without a trace of fray or wear—which is equal almost to three years' satisfactory wear. And every TruVal collar is the genuine Super Fair-flex, guaranteed to keep its shape and good looks without the benefit of starch. It's laundry-tested and approved by the American Institute of Laundering.

FALLS HIGH COURT TEAM WEAKENED BY LOSS OF 3 PLAYERS

Season Scheduled To Open With Moorestown On December 6th

COACH IS CONFIDENT

Makes No Predictions But Says That Team Has Possibilities

FALLSINGTON, Dec. 5—Loss of the three regular members of the team who graduated last June is expected to weaken the 1941 edition of the Falls Township high school basketball team. Practice sessions have begun and it will be but a short while, December 6th, to be exact, that the Falls boys open their season.

Commenting on his team's prospects, Coach "Jimmy" Doheny is making no predictions, his only statement being: "I am not making any claims of a championship team. I have never boasted about what any of my teams will do. We always have possibilities—but we always have severe handicaps. We do expect to have a team that will not disgrace our good name; one that will go down after a fight only."

Coach Doheny, whose hair is just beginning to turn gray, has spent 17 years as a teacher in the Falls high school, and in the past seven years has gotten together enough boys to represent that school on the basketball court. Doheny graduated from West Chester State Teachers College.

One of the handicaps that confronts Doheny is that his school is not equipped with a basketball court. All his home games are played in Trenton on the Junior No. 4 floor. His practice sessions, what little he can get of them, are also held in the Jersey city.

But despite this, Doheny and his school managers have arranged one of the toughest schedules that any school of this section will face. The team opens with Moorestown, N. J., on Dec. 6, then goes on to play school, and then goes on to play school, and then goes on to play school, meeting such teams as Trenton P. S. D., Trenton Catholic, Bordentown, Allentown, Hightstown, Princeton, the Lower Bucks schedule, Bryn Athyn Academy, and closing on February 28th with the annual Alumni tilt. In all, the Doheny men have a schedule of 21 games, providing the two open dates are filled.

Doheny will have a difficult job in moulding a team that will equal the calibre of last season, as the loss of "Bill" Batten, Stan Feikner, and George "Pop-eye" Lovett, will be keenly felt. Batten is now attending Penn State, Feikner is at West Chester, and Lovett was an All-County forward.

The only regulars left of last season are: Francis Moon, a gigantic center, who should be an improved player with last season's schedule under his belt, and Artie Driscoll, who is beginning his second season on the varsity and is only a junior.

In the attempt to fill the places of those departed, are three letter-winners of last year: Johnny Mannsman, a junior, who played an important part in last year's victories and who was number one guard on the very strong jay-vee team. If he has profited by the strenuous campaign of last year he should make a strong bid for a regular spot. Warren Baker, senior, tall reserve center and forward of last season, and who should make a terrific try for a regular job. His height would make him a valuable asset to any team, but he lacks scoring power and this has been his greatest drawback. Coach Doheny feels that if a little extra degree of confidence is stored in the boy, he will make a varsity position.

Tommy Doyle, also a senior, who has two years of jay-vee basketball. He was captain of his squad and he seems eager to get a fling in faster competition. Doyle's weakness last season was that he failed to cash in on under the basket shots and that he was slow in making his decisions. However, his floor-work seems to over-come these bad traits and it appears as if he is practically assured of a starting position.

Other holdovers from last season's jay-vee team are: Lefty Reed, a senior; Ken Parr, Bob Thompson, Billy Breigle, and Larry Silvi, the latter a junior.

Fallsington was proud of its jay-vee team last season which had an undefeated record against Bucks County opponents which included two victories each over Bristol High J. V. and Morrisville High J. V.

A new plan was formulated last year when a team was composed, entirely of freshmen. This club played nine games and lost but two, both defeats being administered by the Deaf School Juniors of Trenton. At least three of these boys are expected to be strong aspirants for varsity positions.

Two of these players are guards and both flashy. They are Joe Napoli and Chester Caffey, while the other, a center, Sander Arch, is expected to be heard of amply within the year. Another outstanding member of this freshman outfit was Dick Anderson, who has great ability but lacks size necessary for varsity ball.

Coach Doheny has already begun work on his 1940 freshman squad and has announced that Frank Thorpe will captain this team and some of his players are listed as follows: Martin Sessa, Alfred Kratzer, George Cutchinal, Jim Guilfo, John Silvi, Leo Heller, Billy Graham, and Damon Turner.

Altogether, Coach Doheny expects a squad of 32 players, including nine freshmen. Most of these boys have been playing outdoor basketball during lunch hour at the school and it shouldn't take long to round them into shape.

The freshman schedule will include about ten games, including Edgewood Junior High School and the Deaf School Juniors. The Junior Varsity schedule is the same as the varsity.

The schedule follows:

SOAP-MAKERS WIN OUT OVER AUTO BOYS

The spark plugs which kept the Auto Boys in the lead for three quarters of their tilt with the Manhattan Soap team went dead in the final period and enabled the soap workers to win their second tilt of the season in the Bristol Basketball League. Final count was 26-20.

The Auto Boys had the soap manufacturers on the run throughout and although their lead was never in excess of four points, they held it for the first three periods and seemed headed for victory.

As fast as it started, the Auto Boys team went dead. So dead that the Manhattaners crept up, deadlocked in score, and then forged ahead, never to be threatened again.

Four double-deckers in the fourth quarter gave the Duganmen the triumph. Huffnell was the instigator of the trouble when he picked up the ball during a scrimmage and hit the net for a two-pointer. Harkins then followed with a foul goal which tied the score.

McGee scored the Playmen's only points of the last period with a two-pointer but Petrick on a pass from Zeffries counted and this was followed with a pair of goals by "Hunkie" Gallagher. Gallagher's goals settled the issue.

The soap-workers played clean basketball throughout the tilt, committing but two fouls, both of which were converted into points by Wooley and Kervick. Manhattan had six foul points out of twelve tries with Zeffries getting three out of three.

Dugan with six points and Wooley with five boys led the boys of Vito Della in scoring while seven points by Zeffries was Manhattan's best scoring player of the night.

In the second game scheduled for Monday night, the battle for first-place will take place with Rohm & Haas meeting the Proty team.

CHEWACKI PINNED TO MAT BY ERNIE DUSEK

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 5—Ernie Dusek, who never has been known to look for a side door when tough customers roll up their sleeves and start swinging from the ankles, took all the punishment Chief Chewacki could hand out for 28 minutes last night at the Arena. Then he went to work and in less than half a minute he had flattened the wacky Gypsy with a stout forearm to win the feature contest of the weekly wrestling show.

Chewacki punished Dusek with an arm and leg look, a careless right fist and a set of teeth that snapped indiscriminately at Ernie's fat thighs and broad back. The Gypsy had the crowd with him and he revelled in his moments of glory as he held the upper hand. Finally, he grew too bold and started to "push Ernie around too strenuously. Dusek pulled Chewacki to the mat, leaped through the air to plant a clean blow on the Gypsy's jaw and then pounced on him for the fall.

The windup topped a card that was uniformly interesting. In the second feature Paul Boesch drop-kicked Emil Dusek into submission after nearly 25 minutes of action. As might be expected, Emil threw the rule book out the window, but he could not pin the improved Boesch despite his off-color tactics.

As is the custom, the team match provided action galore, with the Herbie Freeman-Eddie Newman dueling in straight falls over Cherokee Charlie and Whitey Gorvo. The Cherokee Kid proved quite a character, what with his bare feet and Indian screams. He was a better entertainer than wrestler, however, which indirectly led to his team's defeat. Before the bout started, Charlie walked along the top rope of one side of the ring.

The opener saw Carl Grey win over Henry Kulkovich in a rough brawl. Kulkovich was disqualified by Referee Jack Gross. He attempted to renew the battle outside the ring, but was hunted to the dressing room under the urging of police.
